Best book on doing business for transformation out there

By Abu Daniel

The world is changing fast, and the way the Church does missions needs to keep up. Business for transformation (B4T) is the future of missions, not simply to get visas but to bring hope via jobs as hope is brought via Christ. Everyone in the world wants a good job, so we take this book seriously and learn from Patrick Lai how to create good jobs in difficult places amongst unreached peoples.

This is an excellent book for anyone interested in starting a business amongst the unreached or for understanding B4T in general. No one has done more research and has more practical experience (a great combination!) in this field than Patrick Lai, so as Larry Sharp states on the back cover he Patrick is the most qualified person to write this book. One note: he leans on principles from his first book, "Tentmaking: The Life and Work of Business as Missions" so I would recommend you read that first or along side this one.

This is a very practical book, not covering the theology of work or missions in general. Instead it focuses on best practices and lots of stories from B4T practitioners around the world. A must read!
